

Appeals Process

Overview:

The appeals process for Delaware Stars for Early Success involves two separate processes, the Technical Review Process and the Dispute Resolution Process. A program may choose to participate in either or both processes. The purpose of these processes is to ensure that an accurate Rating is arrived at for any participating program and that any other grievances are addressed through due process. The Dispute Resolution Process may also be used to appeal a decision to terminate a program from Delaware Stars. Changes in a program or issues that arise from an assessment must be considered through one of these processes.

To initiate a Technical Review a program must complete a “Request for Technical Review/Dispute Resolution Form” available on the Stars website. The Deputy Director and the Assessment Coordinator or Verification Specialist (as appropriate for the Review) will evaluate the Request form and accompanying documentation. This evaluation and determination of error(s) is at the sole discretion of the Delaware Stars. If the review reveals any errors, then the program’s rating score(s) will be adjusted and documentation will be generated (both in paper and electronic forms where appropriate) for the program indicating the new rating.
